

Increased temperature can lead to increased transfer of water from the land to the atmosphere, which results in drier soils and less runoff. As the soil dries out, it absorbs more heat, which

